Coloured Balls

Miss Jade started our morning off by getting our coloured balls and ball pit. Harlow, Alina, Hailey and Norah absolutely loved it.

Alina was placed into the ball pit and she began grabbing a few balls and throwing them, she thought it was so much fun afterwards she even grabbed a blue ball and began to try to eat it.

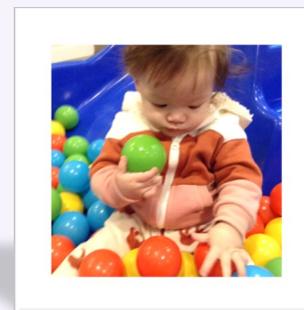

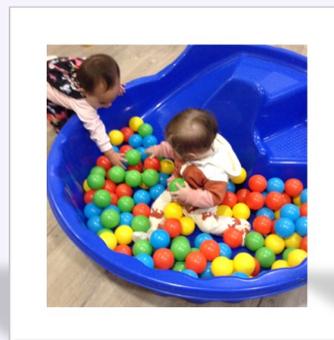

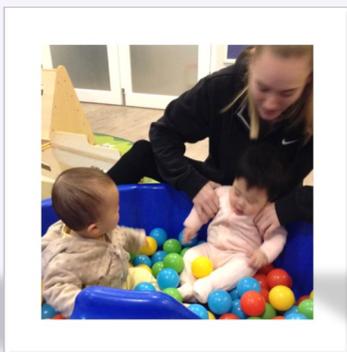

Harlow was a bit curious and stood on the outside of the ball pit shuffling the balls around.

At first Norah and Hailey weren't so sure of the balls but once Miss Matisse was by them they wanted to grab them all. Hailey didn't mind been put in the ball pit either and had the biggest smile on her face.

Having coloured balls in our room gives us endless ideas and opportunities to explore in many ways.

Exploring our room

Our babies really had a good time exploring their room today.

Harlow enjoyed the obstacle course and I have noticed she is getting more confident and becoming a real risk taker.

Hailey liked our soft toy car that she can play in, she liked how it felt and how soft it was, and she was even trying to grab the wheel of the car.

Norah was adventurous and wanted to play with our wooden toys she particularly didn't want to let go of the wooden hammer. She liked to use the hammer banging the different colours on the stand.

Alina is getting so good at exploring different avenues of our room she liked our assorted balls with different bits and pieces in them and would shake the balls her favourite one was the one with the "bells," inside.

What a great day today in our "Starfish room."

Story time Reading is fun

As we have plenty of sensory books in our room our babies like to touch and feel them. They like all the different textures some are soft, some are a bit on the rough side, and some are a little weird to touch. They are all good at sitting there and listening to our books. Sensory books can be a great addition to our every day reading routine with your babies.

Norah had so much interest in our books today, she was so focused and fascinated on two books called "Never follow a Spider!" and "Never touch a grumpy bunny!" I think we all adore the bunny book, it has so much humour and we all like our rhyming books.

Meeting Kisses The Snake

Before afternoon tea this afternoon, the starfish had a special visit from kisses the snake. Miss Aura let all of the babies have a look and touch Kisses. Harlow was so excited about having kisses in the starfish room she was the first to hop up and start touching her on her back and staying very close to Miss Aura so she could see Kisses. Alina and Norah were both very confused as to what it was and what it was doing in our room. After a small amount of time they finally reached out and touched her soft and smooth skin. Hailey decided to keep her distance not wanting to touch the snake at all and was happy to just look from a distance. What a fun and exciting experience for the babies to exploring a different animal today. Miss Matisse even got to hold Kisses although she was even nervous to hold her. Well Done Starfish for being so gentle with Kisses!!!

Reflection of the day

Our day has been pretty good. I feel like with the weekend we have had to adjust to our routine here back in our Starfish room.

We have been exploring our room today from the wooden toys, as-sorted balls to our puzzles and books.

We look forward to meeting Miss Megha tomorrow.
