With Miss Megha and Miss Matisse

Welcome Grace!

Today our new friend– Grace joined us in Starfish room!

You have had such an amazing first day today where we had the joy of watching you explore the room confidently seeing all the different toys you will be able to play with in the future. We cant wait to be apart of your learning journey and watch you grow here at BTP.

Miss Megha and Miss Matisse

For art time today we tried out a new DIY edible paint. It ended up being more of a water colour paint consistency, but our babies still loved it. Miss Alaura set up the art mat outside under the shade sails so our babies could make all the mess they liked. Arden took full advantage of the set up, by splashing around in the paint, putting her whole hand in the bowls of paint and flicking it around. Whilst Maddie was slightly more delicate with her approach, dipping her hands in the paint observing the different colours and touching her hand to the piece of paper. Little Bonnie was not very interested in putting her hands in the bowls of paint, so we poured a little amount on the page for her to move around. She was very engaged in this art experience and looked to enjoy the feel of the paint on her fingers.

Edible Paint Activity

Spontaneous!

Children expressed their likes and interests through grabbing and pulling the toys from the shelves and making tehari way towards us while babbling something and pointing to few toys which they want to get. It shows that children are on the way to develop their speech and language skills and also the cognitive development.

Charlotte loved to take some selfies with Ms Alaura whereas Hailey loved to make efforts for crawling towards a push-walker. Amelia is developing her social skills as she shared most of her toys with her peers today. Well done, Amelia!

Wooden wheels board!

After morning tea, children were very excited to explore what was in the shelves, exercising their fine and gross motor skills. Grace crawled to one of the shelves and grabbed the wooden wheels board. She observed it carefully at first and then started taking out the wheels one by one. "You can put them back like this, Grace!" I told her while putting the wheels back and she followed me in that.

Hailey enjoyed her tummy time while exploring the purple wheel and turning it upside down. Bonnie sat in Matisse's lap and loved to investigate the yellow wheel through her own way by putting it in her mouth.

Maddy and Amelia joined their peers in this activity by sharing the wheels with each other.

Reflection of the day

We had a fun filled day today where children developed peer bonding's and shared toys with each-other. Children made spontaneous choices and spent good time in investigating them.
